BOND INDEX FUND (NOBOX)

As of 09/30/21

FUND COMMENTARY

Central Banks began to signal a pivot away from the extraordinary accommodation, led by the expectation of a reduction in official bond purchases in the U.S. and a discussion of rate increases in the U.K. Fiscal stimulus is also expected to wane next year, while the U.S. Treasury is discussing a reduction in supply. The labor market continued to heal, albeit at a much slower pace. Inflation remained elevated (driven mostly by the transitory components of used cars, hotels and airlines) but also began to show tentative signs of slowing. Investors are focused on the speed and duration of economic growth versus a reduction in central bank and fiscal accommodation while also keeping a close eye on COVID-19 variants.

The third quarter was relatively stable for markets. Equities closed the quarter flat, as stocks declined from all-time high's during the final month. Interest rates were stable with 3-5 year maturities increasing 8 basis points (0.08%), while longer dated maturities fell. Investment grade corporate spreads widened slightly off of multi-year tight, while securitized assets were generally flat.

The Fund performed similar to its benchmark in the quarter as designed.

Performance quoted represents past performance and does not guarantee future results. Investment return and principal value will fluctuate so that shares, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than their original cost. Current performance may be lower or higher than that shown here. Performance data current to the most recent month end is available by calling 800-595-9111.

The Gross and Net Expense Ratios are as of the most recent prospectus. The Net Expense Ratio includes contractual expense reimbursements that, if not extended, will end on July 31, 2022.

Bond Risk: Bond funds will tend to experience smaller fluctuations in value than stock funds. However, investors in any bond fund should anticipate fluctuations in price, especially for longer-term issues and in environments of rising interest rates.

Index Fund Risk: The performance of the Fund is expected to be lower than that of the Index because of Fund fees and expenses. It is important to remember that there are risks associated with index investing, including the potential risk of market decline, as well as the risks associated with investing in specific companies.

Mortgage-Backed Securities Risk: Mortgage-backed investments involve risk of loss due to prepayments and, like any bond, due to default. Because of the sensitivity of mortgage-related securities to changes in interest rates, the Fund's performance may be more volatile than if it did not hold these securities.
