STOCK INDEX FUND (NOSIX)

As of 12/31/20

FUND COMMENTARY

In the fourth quarter of 2020, large-cap equities as measured by the S&P 500 Index (Fund Index) returned 12.15%, underperforming small-cap equities as measured by the S&P 600 Index which returned 31.29%.

Within the Fund Index, the top-performing sectors over this time period were energy and financials returning 27.75% and 23.22%, respectively. Real estate and consumer staples were the worst performing sectors for this quarter with returns of 4.83% and 6.35%, respectively.

The Stock Index Fund returned 12.10% for the quarter compared to its benchmark, the S&P 500 Index, which returned 12.15%. The U.S. market entered the fourth quarter with heightened volatility, seeing a small correction in October before resuming the previous quarter's rally in risk assets during November. Initial concerns in late October regarding the presidential election went away quickly, as equity markets rebounded in November on the prospects of a vaccine. The rally persisted at a slower rate into December, despite an uptick in COVID-19 cases and deaths. Equity markets seemed to be more forward-looking, as two vaccines were approved for use and have begun distribution. Also helping to continue the rally was a long awaited $900 billion stimulus package passed by the U.S. Congress in mid-December. The U.S. Federal Reserve once again re-emphasized its accommodative stance, citing that their main priorities are still to achieve maximum employment and inflation at a 2% average rate over the long run. Credit spreads continued to tighten over the quarter, with both positive vaccine news and continuing monetary support from the U.S. Fed helping to keep credit markets strong. Oil followed a pattern similar to equities, as October saw prices drop. This was followed by a rally in November and December off of positive vaccine news and optimism about increased demand in the near future. Both WTI and Brent finished the quarter near early March levels. U.S. equities posted positive returns across all capitalizations on the quarter, as the country looks to the new year with hopes of putting the pandemic behind them.
