STOCK INDEX FUND (NOSIX)

As of 06/30/20

FUND COMMENTARY

In the second quarter of 2020, large-cap equities as measured by the S&P 500 Index (Fund Index) returned 20.54%, underperforming small-cap equities as measured by the S&P 600 Index which returned 21.94%.

Within the Fund Index, the top-performing sectors over this time period were consumer discretionary and information technology returning 32.86% and 30.53%, respectively. Utilities and consumer staples were the worst performing sectors for this quarter with returns of 2.73% and 8.12%, respectively.

The Stock Index Fund returned 20.54% for the quarter compared to its benchmark, the S&P 500 Index, which returned 20.54%. The U.S. market saw a drastic turnaround in the second quarter of 2020 with the best quarterly return in over two decades. After a first quarter drawdown caused by a global fear of the COVID-19 virus locked down several regions of the globe, optimism prevailed in the second quarter on news of fiscal and monetary stimulus, pending treatments and economic reopening. Governments and central banks around the world announced unprecedented stimulus packages aimed to curb a global depression, while the U.S. Federal Reserve also kept interest rates near zero. Russia and Saudi Arabia in the middle of all the virus fear announced an oil trade war; this coupled with a drastic decrease in demand due to the economic shutdown caused global oil prices to crater in April with front-month futures actually trading at negative values for the first time ever. Credit spreads tightened due to the U.S. Federal Reserve announcing they were going to purchase corporate debt while treasury yields remained near an all-time low. Consumer Discretionary and Information Technology were the best-performing sectors, benefitting from perceived economic recovery. Energy and Materials sectors also outperformed, aided by the rebound in oil prices and manufacturing in the back half of the quarter. Utilities and Consumer Staples sectors lagged the overall market, as fears retreated of an extended virus threat to global economies.
