PORTFOLIO MANAGER COMMENTARY

While risk assets performed well, and yields on US Treasuries further out the curve generally drifted higher during August, money market rates drifted slightly lower as T-Bill supply declines and MMF industry assets remain relatively elevated. Repo and other overnight rates like SOFR drifted 2 to 3bps lower in the second half of the month, exhibiting more volatility than we've seen since the Spring. Credit spreads, on the other hand, remained range bound at relatively tight levels, with US Dollar libor nearing all time lows. The outlook for additional fiscal stimulus out of Washington remains unclear, but could be a driver of additional T-Bill supply and related price action in the money markets throughout the remainder of the year. Finally, while the Fed's annual symposium in Jackson Hole was arguably the most meaningful in years, the conclusion of their policy framework review had few implications for the money markets, other than to affirm the market's pricing that any rate hikes are many years off. We'll continue to monitor market pricing closely and selectively add high quality credits and duration to remain long to our peer group, while maintaining a strong liquidity profile to accommodate any unexpected outflows.

PORTFOLIO OUTLOOK

Our investment strategy continued to focus on liquidity and capital preservation, as headline risks dominated the landscape and low money market yields offered little protection against volatility. In line with this, new investments were concentrated in higher quality exposures and maturities within six months. Where appropriate we selectively extended the term of investments in longer dated sovereign agency and higher rated securities which continued to offer superior liquidity and credit quality. Overall the fund duration remained steady and conservatively positioned.
